BORGOLUCE

Veneto, Italy

HISTORY

More than 1,000 years ago, in A.D. 958 or 959, the Italian King Berengario II gifted the area called Corte Lovadina to Rambaldo, who is an ancestor of the Collalto family. The Collalto family still owns this and the surrounding lands.

VINEYARDS & WINEMAKING

45 miles due north of Venice, the Collalto estate stretches from the hills of Susegana to the plains of Santa Lucia di Piave and as far as the municipality of Pieve di Soligo. Borgoluce only vinifies its own grapes, and all of their wines come solely from their vineyards. The property is comprised of 2,500 acres (1,000 ha), with approximately 240 acres (97 ha) under vine.

Ninni and Caterina di Collalto, together with their mother Trinidad and Caterina's husband, Lodovico Giustiniani, carry on the family tradition of overseeing a company diverse in agriculture. The company philosophy is firmly rooted in sustainable farming methods. They limit their environmental impact by reducing pesticides, creating energy through the use of renewable sources, and protecting, preserving, improving, and revering the countryside.

Appellation Valdobbiadene

Year Founded 938 A.D.

Proprietors
Trinidad, Giuliana, Ninni & Caterina Collalto

Winemaker Elisa Confortin

Annual Production
12,000 9L cases

Varieties Cultivated Glera

Soil Types clay with high concentration of calcium carbonate